Editor and Reviewer comments:

Reviewer #1:

1. For more details, explain the methods used in the research. For example, explain how informants were selected, the inclusion and exclusion criteria, and how the in-depth interviews were conducted. This will provide clarity about the validity of the study.
2. Review the title of the article. Even though the article's title gives a general idea of the topic covered, it is advisable to make the title more specific and catchy to interest potential readers.
3. Expansion of research results will provide benefits. Provide more detail about the key findings found in this study. Explain in more detail the factors that influenced their decision not to have children and the specific ways in which they cope with the social stigma they face.
4. Linking studies with related literature. Explain in more detail how the findings of this research relate to previous research on the phenomenon of "childfree" and its social impact. Discuss differences or similarities between your findings and previous research to provide better context.
5. Expand your keyword list. Include some additional keywords that are relevant to the topic of this research. For example, you might consider adding keywords such as "Gender Roles" or "Societal Expectations" to provide a complete picture of the topics covered.

I hope you can make improvements as soon as possible and send the revised article again via this email.

Dear

Encup Supriatna

UIN Sunan Gunung Djati, Bandung

Thank you for your efforts to improve your article.

Based on the Reviewers' considerations, the article has, at some point, increased. However, you have to improve on a few more points. Hopefully, you are willing to do it.

Please follow the following revision instructions:

#Reviewer 2:

1. Further evaluation of the generalizability of the findings. Take a deeper look at the extent to which the findings from this study can be applied to the wider population in Indonesia. Did the informants interviewed represent sufficient variation in terms of social, cultural, or geographical background? Discuss the limitations of generalizing the findings within the broader context.
2. Consider including a more detailed description of the methodology. In addition to describing the qualitative approach and in-depth interviews used, provide more detailed information on how the data was collected, how the analysis was carried out, and whether efforts were made to ensure the validity and reliability of the findings.
3. Be clear about the implications of the research. Discuss in more detail the practical and theoretical implications of the findings of this study. How can the results of this research contribute to our understanding of the "childfree" phenomenon, and what are the implications for society or related policies?
4. Review the structure of the article. Pay attention to the logical flow of each section of the article, including the introduction, methods, results, and conclusion. Make sure there are clear connections between the sections so the reader can easily follow your train of thought.
5. Review the reference sources used in more detail. Check the accuracy and actuality of the references used in the article. Make sure that the sources used to support the arguments and findings described in the article. In addition, expand the reference list by adding relevant recent literature in this research area.

Articles that have been revised and please send them back via this email.
